

DIGNITY IN A GIRL

It Attracts to Her the Respect of All Men.

IT WINS BOTH HEART AND MIND

The Ideal Girl is the Girl That Carries the Dignity of Her Mother.

Woman Needs.

A young woman has written this department asking whether men admire dignified women.

Whether defined dignified as "the state of being worthy or honorable; elevation of mind or character; true worth; excellence."

No man admires a woman whom he cannot respect and honor, and then too feelings are the streams from which start the river of love. Every man has his standard of ideal womanhood, and that standard in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is represented in his mother. Her gentle dignity has inspired his respect and love, and as the years roll on and she begins to show the marks of time's fingers, he is ever so light, he is drawn nearer to her. It is to her that he turns in the hour of trial and misfortune, ever sure that she is worthy and that her sweet counsel and sympathy will ease the burden and give him new strength. The very force of her dignity is a mountain of strength to him.

The slinky, forward, loud-voiced young woman, who is every ready to do anything that is not slow, is smiled on by men, who are apparently amused at her actions. She has no dignity, no self-respect, and without these she cannot hope to obtain the one thing that every true woman prizes—the love of an honest, honorable man. The little liberties she has permitted have condemned her.

Be dignified, my dear girl; be like the best woman on earth, your mother. Think how your entire family and those who know her look up to and honor and since studied one year in Brussels under the celebrated Caponic and four years in Paris under the best still life masters of the day. All her productions yet put on exhibition are in still life, and she has made no attempt to follow the lead of Rosa Bonheur. Her mother was not only possessed of great artistic talent, but was witty and intellectual, quite up to the standard of her family, the Sheremans. She was the sister of the general and the senator. Mrs. Bernard was the daughter of an Governor of Ohio and a niece of General Sherman. During the first administration she was a social favorite in Washington, and she has
